Any visiting Daughters will be cordially welcomed by the members of Aloha Chapter.

The Supreme Court handed down a decision this morning upholding Deputy High Sheriff George Sea in his contention that certain bags of sugar, which he levied on, belonged to Ah Ping, instead of the Kipahulu Sugar Company or Hackfeld & Co. The syllabus of the case is as follows:

Contracts—extrinsic evidence: Words in an agreement having an ordinary meaning free from ambiguity and not technical cannot be explained by extrinsic evidence.

Contracts—construction: An agreement whereby a plantation company makes over its plantation to 1 to cultivate sugar cane and make sugar thereon without charge for the use of it, and declaring that its standing crops are to be the property of A, and that the company will pay for the sugar delivered f. o. b. vessel at company's wharf, $20 a ton for the season of 1907, $30 per ton for the season of 1908, and $30 per ton for the season of 1909, there being no provision in the agreement for securing delivery of the sugar to the company, makes the sugar stored in a warehouse on the plantation subject to delivery to the company subject to levy of executions on judgments by creditors of A, although under the agreement the company advanced all the funds for running the plantation.

DISCHARGED SEAMAN REFUSES HIS PAY

Won't Let Surgeons Fix Disabled Shoulder; Discharge Row

Refusing to let the surgeons operate on him, declining to accept his discharge and pay, and yet admitting his inability to work owing to injury, Antoni Sivitz, fireman on the American-Hawaiian freighter Alaskan, caused all sorts of trouble in Shipping Commissioner Almy's office today.

Sivitz broke his collarbone by falling while on the Alaskan. He was put ashore about ten days ago and sent to the Queen's Hospital for treatment. The surgeons of the Marine Hospital Service examined his injuries and announced that an operation would be necessary. Sivitz is alleged to have refused positively to allow the doctors to operate, insisting that they could not understand his language; and that he wanted to be sent to San Francisco, where the surgeons would know more about his case.

Sivitz is alleged to have been very troublesome, so, at his own request, the surgeons discharged him, not considering his case so pressing, but that he could wait until reaching San Francisco, without danger.

Sivitz then returned to the ship and announced that he wanted to continue on to San Francisco. Captain Bennett made arrangements to let him pass on the Pleiades and then took him before the Shipping Commissioner to arrange a settlement.

The papers were duly made out and Captain Bennett started to pay the man the money due him. Then the trouble arose. Sivitz evidently thought that he should receive pay for the time that he was in the hospital. Almy told him that there was no law which upheld him in his contention, but he shook his head and refused to take the money. Finally the Commissioner gave Bennett papers releasing him from all responsibility, locked the money in the safe, and told Sivitz that he could get it whenever he got ready to call for it.
